Are You Reading The "Doniphan Expedition?"

IF not, you are missing something worth your while. The story of the Deniphan expedition of 1846-47 into Mexico, through El Paso, is being printed in The Herald every day in instalments. If you have failed to read the preceding chapters, you are missing something worth while. Turn right now to the editorial page and read of the defeat of the Mexican army by these Missouri and Eansas volunteers in the hattle of Brazito, 40 miles north of El Paso, close to the present town of Las Cruces. The next issue of The Herald will carry still further accounts of the battle and the next issue will tell of the march from Brazito (near Las Cruces) to El Paso and Juarez. Subsequent issues will tall of the accupation of Juarez and El Paso and the conduct of the natives at that time (January and February, 1847) when the United States was at war with the Mexican republic.

This series of articles is interesting to every El Pasoan, whether a newcomer or an oldtimer. Begin reading today's instalment. Hunt up your back numbers and read the previous instalments, telling of the battle of Sacramento and the capture of Chihushus city and its occupation.
